What's important to me...

- Doing something that makes a difference
- I like to see something through but I am willing to give up pet projects if someone has better ideas.
- Family and friends. Time with them helps me relax.
- I like coaching and mentoring people. I have no problem with being used as a sounding board to explore ideas before they begin to take shape.
- I enjoy taking complex issues and getting to the heart of the matter.
- Treating people equally and fairly.
- Having fun. I have always believed that work is to be enjoyed.

How to support me well at work...

- I need to understand the outcomes of an activity. I feel more comfortable if I can understand the risks involved so that I can balance these against the rewards.
- I get frustrated with jargon - and acronyms. Avoid them to enable me to understand at the first hearing or reading.
- Conversely, tell me if you do not understand what I have said or if you think I have misunderstood. I can then learn.
- If possible, give me a deadline. That helps me plan and I like to be organised.
- I have a tendency to want things done speedily. Be honest if that is not possible but explain why.
- I like positive and supportive discussions. I find people who always see the negative side demotivating.
